Population Growth by Area 2000-2010

Staten Island +5.6%

Background

Each year the Staten Island Ferry provides over 21 million people, almost 75,000 riders every weekday (110 daily trips), with ferry service between Staten Island and Lower Manhattan. Operated and maintained by NYC DOT, the ferry is the single non-vehicular form of transportation between Staten Island and Manhattan.

In 2005, the City of New York unveiled two new ferry terminals for the Staten Island Ferry—the Whitehall Ferry Terminal located in Lower Manhattan and the St. George Ferry Terminal located in Staten Island. Both of these terminals feature soaring ceilings, an abundance of natural light and seating areas. Additionally, approximately 5,000 square feet of retail concession space was created in the Whitehall Terminal.

Staten Island Ferry Facts

- The Staten Island Ferry has been a municipal service since 1905
- It currently carries over 21 million passengers annually on a 5.2 -mile run between the St. George Terminal and the Whitehall Terminal
- Service is provided 24 hours a day, 365 days a year
- The Staten Island Ferry is the most reliable form of mass transit, with an on-time performance of over 96 percent
- A four-boat (15 minute headway) rush hour schedule is maintained
- During the day, between rush hours, boats are regularly fueled and maintenance work is performed
- On weekends, three boats are used (64 trips each weekend day)
- Over 33,000 trips are made annually

Whitehall Ferry Terminal

Whitehall Ferry Terminal Neighborhood

- The Whitehall Ferry Terminal is located at the tip of Manhattan, in proximity to Lower Broadway and Water Street.
- Lower Manhattan is the third largest Central Business District in the country with nearly 86 million square feet of office space and over 300,000 office employees.
- In 2005, there were approximately 60,000 people living in Lower Manhattan (below Canal Street), of which 18,000 people lived in the neighborhood of the Whitehall Terminal.

- While the population in Lower Manhattan is relatively small compared to other Manhattan residential markets, more people are choosing to live in the area, resulting in unprecedented population growth.
- Households in Lower Manhattan are affluent, with a median income of over $100,000 compared to the citywide median income of nearly $40,000.
- As new office buildings such as 7 World Trade Center, as well as future buildings such as the Freedom Tower and the other World Trade center site buildings are occupied over the next decade, employee population in Lower Manhattan is expected to increase significantly.

Whitehall Ferry Terminal Area Attractions

The Whitehall Ferry Terminal is located close to the landmark Battery Maritime Building and a number of tourist attractions such as Battery Park, Ellis Island, the New York City Police Museum, and the Museum of Jewish Heritage.

According to the latest data available from NYC & Company, of the 40 million people who visited New York City in 2004, 8.1 million visited Lower Manhattan.

Route Information

Ferry Rider Demographics

Nearly 75,000 passengers ride the Staten Island Ferry each weekday, for a total of approximately 21 million passengers each year. These riders are made up of area residents, office workers, and visitors. Approximately 29,500 residents live in the St. George Terminal neighborhood and 18,000 residents live in the Whitehall Terminal neighborhood. Below is a breakdown of the riders and their place of residence:

Resident Riders

Place of Residence	Morning	Mid-day	Sunday	Total	Total (#)
Staten Island	87.5%	54.0%	33.0%	58.2%	527
Other NYC borough	2.3%	10.9%	5.7%	6.3%	57
Northern New Jersey	1.7%	0.7%	2.3%	1.5%	14
Visitor	8.6%	34.4%	59.0%	33.9%	307

Source: HCM Marketing Research; Economics Research Associates

- As shown in Figure 3 above, approximately two-thirds of the ferry riders are area residents, while the remaining are tourists or visitors to the area. Of the area residents, a significant majority, 58 percent, are from Staten Island, followed by 6 percent from other City boroughs, and 2 percent from northern New Jersey.
- Visitors who took the ferry were mostly from outside the metro area, with nearly 47 percent comprising of domestic travelers residing greater than 50 miles from New York City and another 44 percent comprised of foreign visitors.
- Less than nine percent of the visitors identify themselves as metro area residents.
- The high proportion of foreign visitors is a significant departure from the overall visitor profile in New York City as a whole, where only 16 percent of the 42.6 million annual visitors in 2005 were international visitors according to NYC & Company.

Demographic Profile	Area Residents	Visitors
Female	53%	65%
Married/Marital-type relationship	49%	55%
Have children at home	41%	35%
Professional	38%	35%
Student	17%	21%
Median household income	$62,593	$64,344

Source: HCM Marketing Research; Economics Research Associates

- As shown in Figure 4, approximately half of resident riders are female; the share of female ferry riders among visitors is nearly two-thirds.
- For both rider types, a substantial share are married or in a marital-type relationship.
- The number of professionals among resident riders is slightly higher than visiting riders.
- Median household income for visiting riders is slightly higher, $64,300, when compared to the median household income, approximately $62,600, for resident riders.

Source: HCM Marketing Research; Economics Research Associates

- As shown in Figure 5 above, a vast majority of the riders in the weekday morning commute to work, followed by those who have a business appointment or are attending school.
- Sunday commuters are most likely to have a personal activity or appointments in the City, although nearly a third, commute to work.
- Overall, including weekday and weekend hours, over 90 percent of the residents ride the ferry on work or business-related purposes – commuting to work, attending to a personal or business appointment, or attending school.
- A majority of the commuting residents work in Manhattan – and of those nearly half are on their way to Lower Manhattan, while 23 percent commute to a job located in Midtown or on the Westside.
- Nearly two-thirds of resident ferry riders are regular weekday commuters who typically ride the ferry five or more times a week.
- Weekday morning rush hour passengers take the most trips in a typical week, 5.3; followed by mid-day passengers, 4.2; and Sunday passengers, 3.3. On average, residents took 4.5 trips on the ferry every week.
- Over a third of passengers use the bus to reach the St. George Terminal, while about one-fifth use the Staten Island Railway, followed by private motor vehicles or on foot.
- After departing the ferry in Manhattan, three-quarters of all resident ferry riders use the subway to reach their destination.

Visitor Riders

Reason	Responses	Percentage
View of Statue of Liberty	205	68%
Boat ride	70	23%
Tourist attractions on Staten Island	19	6%
Visit people on Staten Island	18	6%
Other	31	10%

Source: HCM Marketing Research; Economics Research Associates

- As shown in Figure 6 above, more than two-thirds of the visitors ride the ferry to see the Statue of Liberty followed by a quarter who enjoy a boat ride.
- Only a minority of the visitors ride the ferry to visit people or tour attractions in Staten Island.
- About two-thirds of New York City visitors stay in the area for four days or more, including about one-fifth, who stay for eight days or more.
- Most tourists visit New York City for recreation or pleasure; the remaining tourists came here for business purposes or for a convention or trade show.

Source: HCM Marketing Research; Economics Research Associates

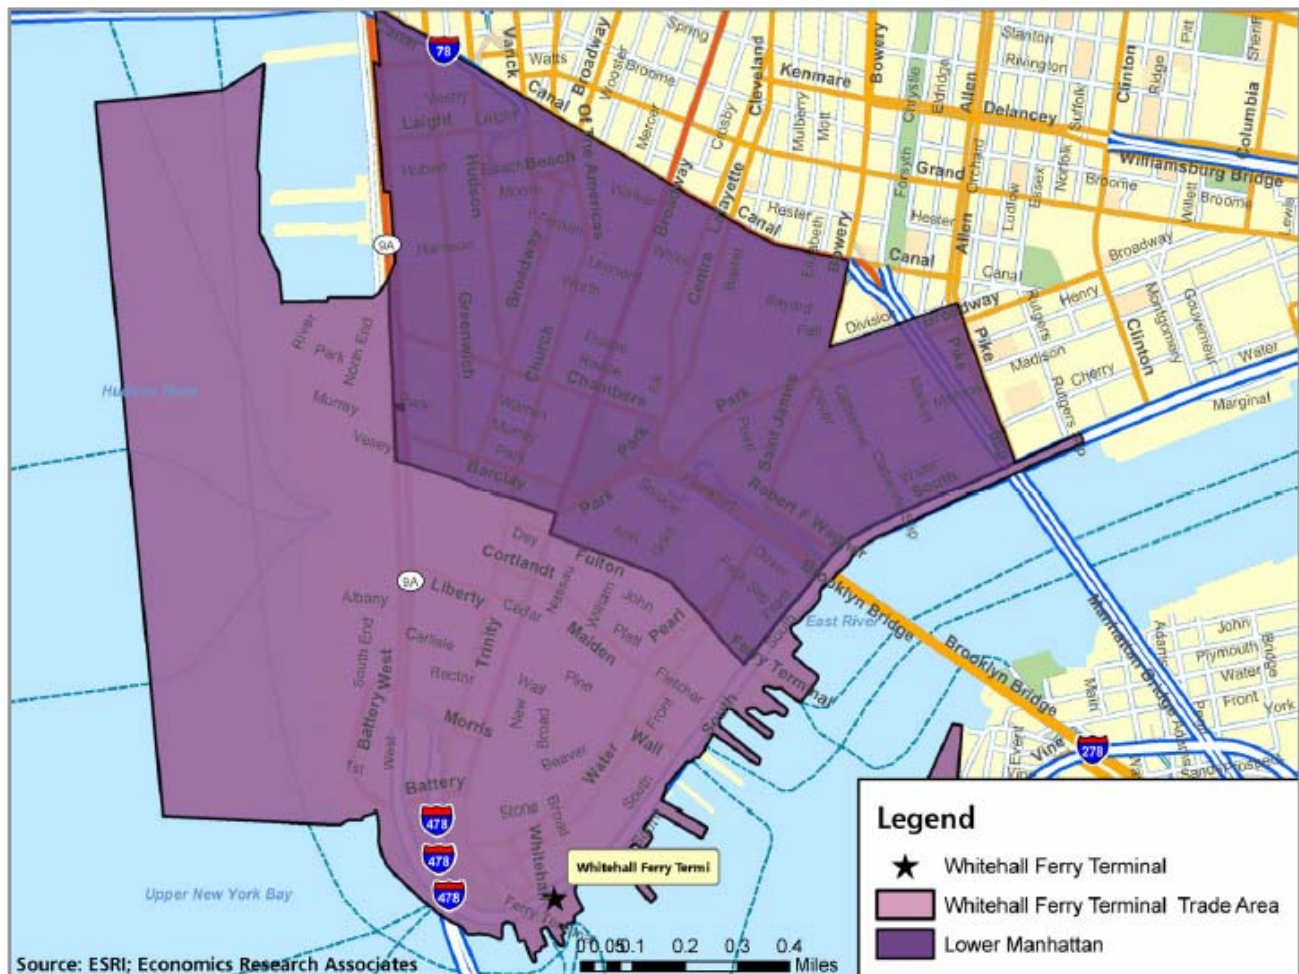

- As illustrated in Figure 7 above, over three-fourths of visitors ride with two or more other people when taking the ferry for an average of three people.

- Passengers using the ferry on Sunday travel with an average of 3.6 people, while passengers using the ferry on Thursday traveled with an average of 2.3 people.

Whitehall Ferry Terminal Trade Area

A study conducted by an NYCEDC consultant defined the Whitehall Ferry Terminal Trade Area (herein referred to as the WH Trade Area) as bounded roughly by Fulton Street to the north, South Street to the east, and Battery Park City to the west. This area was identified because of its proximity to the Terminal, as well as, the large concentration of daily commuters, including area office workers and daytime visitors to the Terminal. See Figure 8 below.

Socio Demographic Overview

In 2005, there were approximately nearly 60,000 people living in Lower Manhattan (below Canal Street), of which 18,000 people lived in the WH Trade Area. In the 15 years from 1990, population in the WH Trade Area grew at more than twice the pace of the growth rate in all of Lower Manhattan.

- As shown in Figure 9 above, the median age in the WH Trade Area has increased since 2000, jumping from 31.8 years to an estimated 34.4 years in 2005.
- The median income of WH Trade Area households in 2005 is estimated to be nearly $105,000, up 56 percent from 1990. This is significantly higher than the estimated median household income of nearly $61,000 for Lower Manhattan as a whole.

Area Resident Occupations

Figure 10 below shows the distribution of occupations of residents in the WH Trade Area. In 2000, 72 percent were professionals working in the management and other related occupations, followed by 21 percent in sales and office occupations. Both of these occupational categories are associated with high salaries and high spending potential on retail and service items.
